BREED THEATER.

Auld Lang Syne, Delightful Scotch Drama, in Two Reels.

Perhaps the most delightfully quaint and attractive motion picture that the breed has offered this season is the pne today entitled Auld Lang Syne. This monster production is in two reels and is redolent of the heather fields, lilled to overflowing with characters are neutral to be questioned or doubt. lifed to evernowing with characters too natural to be questioned or doubted, and in all a perfect film drama of the highest order and type.

The action is based upon Bobbie Burns' great and world-wide poem of the same name, that has touched the hearts of all nations.

The management emphasizes the an-

The management emphasizes the an-

the same name, that has touched the hearts of all nations.

The management emphasizes the anacouncement of this great attraction with the assurance that it is one of surpassing grandeur and beauty, and so of the same high character and order of the other famous two and three feel pictures presented at the Breed his season. Appearing in this picture Miss Florence Turner, the prime avorite of the great Vitagraph cast, supported by the all star company, in which Jean, the Vitagraph Scotch colle, plays no small part.

Two Scotch farmer lads, Tammas and Geordie, fast friends and members of the same clan, are in love with Jenny, a little Scotch lass. Geordie persists in proposing to her, but Tammas wins her. On her wedding day Geordie is not invited to attend, but sees festivities from his window, while he is cemforted by his dog, Jean. In sadness he fills his cup with a large draught of consolation and says "Filtake a cup o' kindness yet, for the days of Auld Lang Syne."

Five years later Tammas' and Jenny's little child wanders off through the heather, across the hills, and is lost. All efforts of the child's parents to discover him are fruitless, and they return home disconsolate.

At daybreak Geordie starts out with his flock of sheep, and his good dog. Jean, comes running to him with the child's tam o' shanter, persisting in her master going with her to the place where the child is discovered. On the return of the child Tammas relents in his enmity to Geordie: the two men shake hands, once more become friends and "drink a cup o' kindness," making up their difference with the words of Auld Lang Syne.

THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE BERLIN LINDSTRUM.

Father of earth and Heaven! I call
Thy name!
Round me the smoke and shout of
battle roll;
My eyes are dazzled with the rustling
flame;
Father, sustain an untried soldfer's soul, Or life or death, whatever be the That crowns or closes round this struggling hour.
Thou knowest, if ever from my spirit stole
One deeper prayer, 'twas that no cloud might lower on my young fame! O hear! God of eternal power!

God! Thou art merciful. The wintry form.

The cloud that pours the thunder from its womb.

But show the sterner grandeur of Thy But show the sterner grandeur of Thy form;
The lightnings, glancing through the midnight gloom.
To Faith's raised eye, as caim, as lovely come.
As splendors of the autumnal evening star.
As roses shaken by the breeze's plume.
When like cool incense comes the dewy air.

And on the golden wave the sunset burns afar. God! Thou are mighty! At Thy foot-stool bound.

Lie gazing to Thee, Chance and Life and Death:

Nor in the angel-circle flaming round.

Nor in the million worlds that blaze beneath.

Is one that can withstand Thy wrath's hot breath.
Woe in Thy frown—in Thy smile vic-Hear my last prayer! I ask no mor-fal wreath; Let but these eyes my rescued country Then take my spirit, All Omnipotent, to Thee.

Now for the fight—now for the cannon peal—
Forward—through blood and toil and cloud and fire!
Glorious the shout, the shock, the crash of steel,
The volley's roll, the rocket's blasting spire.
They shake—like broken waves their squares retire—
On them, hussars! Now give them rein and heel;
Think of the orphaned child, the murdered sire—
Earth cries for blood—in, thunder on them wheel!
This hour to Europe's fate shall set the triumph-seal!
